

Artificially prolonging the life of suffering terminally ill people is cruel and unusual punishment. Denying the fatally ill the right to die with dignity and respect, in their own way at a time of their choosing, is simply torture.

How repugnant to keep the dying person alive, who is ready to shed their earthy bonds, by law and legislation of some distant elected bureaucrat. No gross financial profit by unfeeling hospital or pharmaceutical giant justifies individuals suffering a prolonged and doomed life.

No God would deny the faithful, who's time to abandon body has come, who purposefully presented themselves before Heaven, the eternal embrace of their Lord.

Support end of life choice.

Gayle Smith