

I'm writing to support the passage of these two critical pieces of legislation.

This past year has made it clear how important voting rights and access are in our country.

It has also made it clear how reliable early voting and no excuse absentee voting can be. We had a presidential candidate that tested and tried to prove fraud this year in every possible way (some quite desperate and flimsy). The fact that each state was able to certify their elections with little-to-no evidence of voting irregularities is a testament to the effectiveness of mail in voting systems.

All Americans should have equal access to voting. We need all voices to be heard. And we now know that it is possible to both ensure access and ensure reliability.

This is a no brainer for anyone who truly believes in democracy.
