

My name is Meghan LeRose and I am a senior communication major at Southern Connecticut State University. Budget cuts for me, portray a fear for future students as well as my continued academic career, that the quality of education will decrease. Opportunities for an array of majors will become limited , therefore depriving hard working students of their full potential. To begin with, many college students struggle to pay tuition and even pay for meals. It is extremely unjust to drain faculty and student's pockets and energy, when the quality of education does not reciprocate.
